MARINE

A call aboard the American bark George Curtis last evening was profit-less as far as catching the captain, the genial Herbert, was concerned, for he had gone to church, and as nobody aboard, not even the cabin boy, who might be expected to know from close observation of the skipper's conversation, was aware of what denomination claims him, the marine reporter was at a loss as to which church to visit to find him.

The captain not being aboard, it fell to the senior A. B. of the starboard watch to spin a yarn, and he started in with a brief log of the trip of the Curtis from San Francisco and wound up with a sea-serpent story, which he does not claim to be true, but which he says the mate says is gospel.

"On the first day out of Frisco," said he, "there wasn't much doing, though the wind was fair and there was nothing to complain of. On the third day out we passed a steamship going north —I think she was a lime-juicer. On the fourth day we passed another steamer going up, but we could not make her out.

"We had fair winds on the fifth day and the weather began to pick up a bit for going. The sixth day out was good Friday and the cook gave us hot-cross buns and doughnuts, only he sprinkled salt on the latter instead of sugar, and all that was fit to eat was the holes. The captain was angry, right enough, when he bit into the doughnuts, but it was purely accidental, as the informal court martial held forward clearly showed.

"Easter Sunday came, and, strange to say, the chief steward had saved up fresh eggs from San Francisco, so we each had one, and colored, too, with motives written on them. That's the only way we observed the holiday, though there may have been prayers on the poop; I didn't take notice.

"On the tenth day out we had a spanking breeze and all hands felt fine.

CURTIS NEARLY RUN DOWN.

"Toward sunrise of the eleventh day away from San Francisco the watch on deck had the scare of their lives, right enough, for there loomed up, bearing right down on us, a mysterious four-masted schooner not wearing any sidelights. All the light we could see and all there was to warn us of the approach of the unknown vessel was the blinding light, and though the light of the binnacle threw a glare on the catch-holds of the wheel, there wasn't the face of a man behind it, behind the wheel, and we were under the impression that not a soul was on deck, though it may have been that we were just so excited at the moment that we were ready to believe anything, for it was a narrow shave from a collision. As it was, she passed so close on the port side that we could have chucked a line aboard of her, and not a sign of life. I suppose the watch on deck was all asleep. If we could only have made her out, I tell you it would go hard with her, for we would lodge a complaint right enough about her going along without sidelights and menacing navigation like that.

"On the fourteenth day we sighted the bark Gerard C. Tobey. She left San Francisco a day or so after we did and she's bound for Hilo. We caught up with her, but we only saw her for a little while and that night we lost her."

SAW A SEA SERPENT.

"Thus far the voyage had been rather uneventful," continued the senior A. B. of the starboard watch, "but there was real excitement on the sixteenth day out, or rather the sixteenth night out, and I only wish I had been on deck at the time to see the fun, for seeing is believing. But I heard it all from the mate. It was nothing more nor less than a fight between a killer and a sea serpent and it was lucky for us, I'm thinking, that the killer showed up when he did, or the sea serpent might have done us some harm. The mate says the serpent was as long as the ship and showed up on the starboard side at a considerable distance, being first noticeable in the moonlight, his long body sticking out of the water here and there and showing greeny yellow in the glow of the moon. His head was heavy like, and black of out of proportion and was kind of, as near as the mate could make out. He kept coming nearer and nearer to the ship and diving and coming up back first, with arches stuck up out of the water, till finally he comes up head first within ten fathoms of the ship's side, rushing as if something had hold of him. And sure enough it did, for there was a thrashing of the water till it was soapy and a monster of closer bulk hold of whatever it was that we called a sea serpent. 'It's a killer, sure,' said one of the boys, 'and there's going to be a fight.' And there was a fight. The watch on deck never, those that weren't asleep, never thinks of calling any the rest of us, and for that reason we are inclined to give them the laugh, though they swear it's all true. The killer, or grampus, or thrasher, whatever you like to call him, finally gets the sea serpent in the back of the neck and down they went together, barking to beat creation and slicing the waves with gore. I wish I'd seen it myself."

FEARFUL EXPERIENCE ON MARIPOSA.

There is aboard the bark George Curtis, which arrived from San Francisco Saturday evening, W. C. Bushnell, chief steward, who, for a young man of twenty-one, has gone through some tough experiences. Perhaps the most trying of his recent sufferings was a stay of twelve hours alongside the boilers of the S. S. Mariposa. This was about nine months ago and Bushnell was wanting to make his passage from Tahiti to San Francisco. He was anxious to get away in the Mariposa for the reason that he had promised a certain California girl that he would see her about a certain time, and if he missed the Mariposa he missed his appointment. Sailors are usually kind-hearted and simple in matters of business and he, being no exception, had left forty-two dollars, all he had when he got there from Australia, with a chap who had been friendly to him, for safe keeping. The friend kept the money safe and made himself scarce and Bushnell had to stow away to keep his engagement with the lady. He found a friendly under-officer aboard the Mariposa who advised him to "hit the bunkers." Bushnell went aboard the morning of the day of sailing and "hit the bunkers" right alongside the boilers. It was not difficult to get in but it was impossible to get out until his friend on deck gave the word and, the friend not realizing how hot it was, Bushnell nearly perished during the half day he was beside the boilers. He had a small flask of water when he went in, but in the first hour he had sipped it all and was feverish for more. An hour more and he was almost mad and when, at last, he was able to get from beside the boilers to another hiding place, he was so near exhausted, as he himself puts it, that he could not perspire. His condition excited the admiration as well as the sympathy of some of the crew and he was kept hidden and well fed until San Francisco was reached, where he walked ashore with the rest of the passengers.

MIKAHALA FROM KAUAI.

The steamer Mikahala arrived from Kauai ports at 6:15 a. m. yesterday, kahala's route. The Mikahala arrived with nine cabin and 23 deck passengers, 5000 bags of sugar and miscellany.

swells and choppy seas both in and out. The Kinau when the Mikahala left Kauai was discharging at Elele.
She will return to Honolulu with 6700 bags of sugar. Sugar ready for ship-
